Dr. Claudia Wright, Professor of Political Science and Associate Dean of Personnel, was the recent recipient of the 1985 YWCA "Woman of the Year" award in the Public Affairs category.

Currently Chairman of the Manitoba Human Rights Commission and active on administration committees at the University, Dr. Wright has a vast range of social and scientific interests. She has been involved in numerous lectures, radio and television broadcasts, seminars, university programs, and labour relations activities. In 1983 she received the Distinguished Community Services Award.

"Delighted" to receive the award, Dr. Wright admitted that she loves her work and was surprised at being honored for doing something she enjoys. When asked how she feels about women's progress in their strive toward equality, she explained that "the real progress is yet to be made. Under the Charter, women are now equal. But the attitudes of society toward women, and of women towards themselves, must change."
