

UNIVERSITY OF WINNIPEG STUDENTS TO STUDY IN FRANCE

The French Department of The University of Winnipeg is entering into an agreement with the University of Perpignan which will enable about 20 local students to receive a full year of university education in France.

The program, which begins this September, is intended for students who are entering their third year of university. However, if space is available, applications from both students entering their second year and undergraduate degree recipients will be considered.

A University of Winnipeg professor will be responsible for the administration of the program and act as liaison with the host university. He/She will also accompany the students to France and teach two courses during the year.

FLAG-RAISING CEREMONY MOVES INDOORS

Look up...look way, way up! Through your bundles of scarves and frosted eyelashes, you should raise your frozen eyes, even momentarily, to see the new Centennial Flag waving bravely in the brisk (life-threatening?) wind on top of Wesley Hall.

The flag, adorned with the new centenary logo, commemorates the 100th anniversary of Wesley College and the 50th anniversary of United College.

Although we didn't have an official outdoor flag-raising ceremony (because we, ourselves, didn't want to end up as entries in an ice sculpture contest), we somehow feel inspired to clear our throats and strike up a chorus to celebrate this momentous occasion indoors.

Let's start with one popular yell in the Wesley era:

Buka laka, buka laka, buka laka bee,
Chicka laka, chicka laka, chicka laka chee,

Buka laka, chicka laka, zip! boom!
bah!

Wesley! Wesley! Rah! Rah! Rah!
W-E-S-L-E-Y, Wesley.

If that doesn't get your blood flowing, then here's a yell from the days of United Colleges:

Katana, Katana, Kasula, Kasaw!
United, United, Katarah, Kataw!

Wesley! Toba! White and Red!

Ever leading, never led, Rah!! Rah!! UNITED!

And to get your vocal chords humming, here's a song written for the Colleges (to the tune of Solomon Levi): Our college is United Here on Portage Avenue;

That's where we work for Phelps and Kirk O.T. and Ritcey too.

Our lads are great in loud debate

Our girls in sports and fun.

Then ho, for old United, boys, We'll praise her every one.

Chorus: Up then, United! Katana Kasula Kasaw!

Ho then, United! Katan Katarah Katak!

Finally, all together, to the tune of "Old Virginny":

Carry me back to old United,
That's where the students with the high brain power go;
That's were the ladies are fair as the Hail to the new Centennial flag which commemorates the anniversaries of Wesley and United Colleges.

springtime;

That's just the best of all colleges, I know.

There's where I toiled at O.T.'s Mathematics, Latin and French, and the rare poetic line;

No place on earth do I love more sincerely

Than old United, the college that is mine.

Over 275 people crowded Theatre B (Room 4M47) to see the charismatic Mike Duffy talk about free trade.

DUFFY SPEAKS ON FREE TRADE

Students, faculty and staff lined up outside Theatre B (Room 4M47) to see veteran CBC political correspondent Mike Duffy. He was on hand to offer his observations and insights into Manitoba and Free Trade along with an abundant supply of political jokes.

According to Duffy, the issue of free trade is "like passing a kidney stone - the story is over." He predicts the majority of Liberal senators in Canada support free trade and won't post a last-ditch effort to stop the deal. The United States will be the only obstacle left for the Mulroney government to overcome.

While the government claims the economic benefits of the agreement translate into an extra $400 per person and 125,000 new jobs, Duffy said that "the issue is not about dollars and cents, but about our feelings for our country and about our unique way of life."

Duffy noted two pitfalls in the free trade deal. Because of the United States' economies-of-scale, some of our protected social programs such as medicare could be vulnerable to competition from large private companies. "It's like an elephant sleeping beside a mouse. We may be swamped," he said.

Also, there could be problems with agreeing on the definition of a subsidy. What is seen as a social program or regional incentive to Canadians may be seen by the Americans as an unfair subsidy. Duffy said that since the larger partner often dictates the terms to the smaller partner, Canada will probably end up accepting the United States' definition of a subsidy.

CAMPAIGN UPDATE

The University's capital campaign is proceeding well. The total to date is $5,650,000. The pacesetter's division was kicked off on Jan. 21, at which time a number of cards were handed out to volunteer solicitors. A total of $2.4 million in requests are now in the hands of corporations and foundations.

Several extraordinary gifts have been received recently, including $100,000 from a friend of the University and $50,000 from a member of our Board of Regents. These gifts are examples of the commitment and leadership coming from the community.

Just last week, the Great West Life Assurance Company confirmed its pledge of $250,000 to the campaign. This generous gift from one of Manitoba's leading corporations is very important; not only for its face value, but for the example it offers to other companies in the province.

During the next several weeks, it is expected that a number of corporations, individuals and foundations will forward their pledges to the University. Watch In Edition for periodic reports.

Study in France

University of Winnipeg tuition fees, students will be responsible for the cost of their own transportation as well as room and board. Lodging will be provided in studio apartments in a recently-constructed residence. The long-term goal is to find French families who would be willing to provide meals and accommodation.

An unusual aspect of this program is that students will be expected to donate one or two hours of their time each week to volunteer service in the community. This gesture is not entirely unselfish, since it will enable them to make contact with local people and to gain invaluable experience in the use of the spoken language.

Perpignan, located 15 km from the Mediterranean Sea and 30 km from the Spanish frontier is the capital of Le Roussillon, a region famous for the variety of its geographical features and for the mildness of its climate. The University of Perpignan has about 3,000 students from all parts of France and enjoys excellent recreational and sporting facilities.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY FUNDING RESTORATION OF PORTRAIT

The University of Winnipeg Women's Auxiliary will be recognizing our anniversary celebrations with a special gift. The Auxiliary voted to use funds not designated for scholarships to restore a portrait of Rev. J. W. Sparling, first principal of Wesley College. The work will be done under the direction of Sarah McKinnon, University curator.

Jenny Killick of the Traverse Theatre in Edinburgh, Scotland stopped into The University of Winnipeg to speak to a group of Theatre students.

VISITING DIRECTOR TOUTS EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

Jenny Killick, artistic director of the Traverse Theatre in Edinburgh, Scotland, believes that the stage is a place to experiment.

Killick, in Winnipeg for 10 days to observe the operations of the Prairie Exchange Theatre as an artist-in-residence, proudly told a group of University of Winnipeg theatre students that her theatre focusses on non-naturalistic plays. "We didn't use one piece of domestic furniture during our first season of experimental theatre in 1975," she said.

She described experimental theatre as confrontational - plays that elicit a response.

"Experimental theatre grows out of the need of the writer to say something," Killick explained. "Then you use the talent and the craft to try to get that 'something' across,"

"Experimental theatre is always evolving," she added. After the first performance of a new play, for example, the troupe may decide to polish the script slightly or revise it completely depending on their own perceptions and the reaction of the audience.

According to Killick, the Traverse has few problems hiring actors for experimental theatre. She said a lot of actors are tired of doing just living room scenes and are ready to explore non-naturalistic theatre.

As artistic director for the Traverse, Killick regularly participates in the selection of plays. She sits on a selection panel of writers, actors and directors who read over 300 plays per year. The emphasis is on promoting new work, especially of Scottish playwrights, though several international works are also staged.

Killick said the administrative part of her job and the constant battling for funds often encroaches on the time she can spend on the more creative aspects, but they are important because they ultimately contribute to the group's most fundamental question: Can experimental theatre exist alongside mainstream theatre?

TASK FORCE ON STUDENT ACCESSIBILITY ESTABLISHED

A President's Task Force on Student Accessibility has been established to review the current situation and make recommendations on improving student accessibility at The University of Winnipeg. The committee is expected to complete a report by March 31, 1989.

The objective is to achieve equality of opportunity for enrolment and success at the University for all those who have the academic ability and motivation to pursue a post-secondary education. It is intended that accessibility apply not only at the point of admission but also throughout the student's period of university studies.

The task force will focus on two major aspects of this issue: 1) the provision of resources such as information and financial aid to students entering the University; and 2) the provision of support services to student groups with special needs. (This includes mature, physically disabled, remotely located, part-time, Native, immigrant, and other under-represented or disadvantaged groups.)

Professor Nolan Reilly has been appointed as Chair of the task force on a half-time basis throughout the 1988-89 fiscal year, and Lynn Jones, Assistant to the Vice-President (Administration), has been appointed as Executive Officer.

Other members of the task force include the following: Board representatives Derwyn Davies and Norma Walker; Senate representatives Sarah McKinnon and Gunter Weiss; Students' Association representatives Michelle Deschenes and Lee Holleron; Support Staff representative Judy Dyck; Alumni Association representative Dave Downie; President's appointees John Hofley, Evelyn Schaefer, Walter Stein and Alden Turner.
