Message from the President

Presentation Receives Positive Response from Commission

It is my pleasure to welcome everyone back after what I hope has been a pleasant holiday break. I hope you have, as I have, had some time for rest and for enjoyment together with those close to you, and that you are looking forward, as I am, to a busy and productive term.

It is difficult to believe that it has been nearly a month since we made our presentation to the University Education Review Commission. Reports indicate that the commission's response to our brief and to our presentation was very positive, and we expect further discussion with them over the next few months.

The commission has requested several memoranda on specific issues that arose during our discussion with them, and we shall be preparing these over the next few weeks. There may also be further opportunity for general discussion of important issues such as system governance, accountability, and student retention with the review commission and others knowledgeable about these matters.

The commission is expected to report this coming summer, and we do not expect significant change to the system until the government has had an opportunity to review their recommendations. On the other hand, it would be naive to suppose that the commission will not address what they perceive to be the problems within the system.

My sense is that they understand very well the role and mission of universities, but that they believe significant improvements are possible within that role, in governance of the system, in focus of each university, in student retention, in inter-institutional co-operation, in relating to the community, in contributing to economic renewal, in providing education in the North and in the use of new technologies, in developing more opportunities for co-op programs, and so on.

Our own position is a strong one in that we are engaged in an ongoing planning and implementation process, and in that we are already fairly advanced in some of the areas that concern the commission. There

Peer Support Program Open For Business

A Peer Support Program is now functioning and counsellors are eager to be of assistance to students at The University of Winnipeg.

"The program was created in an effort to reach students who need someone to talk to. They sometimes find it more reassuring to talk to their peers, rather than to counsellors, faculty or parents," said Jeff Waldman, vice-president (advocate) of The University of Winnipeg Students' Association (UWSA).

Last year, Waldman's idea to establish a peer support program won the University's Innovative Ideas competition. The contest, held for the first time, was designed to encourage faculty, students and staff to think of creative ways to improve programs or services on campus. Waldman's project received $5,000 in funding for its first-place finish.

Before the holiday season, Waldman and 11 other volunteer counsellors took part in 30 hours of

Wesmen Meet Bisons

The University of Winnipeg Wesmen and the University of Manitoba Bison rivalry is one of the hottest in Canadian sport. The two teams will face each other in the 1993 Duckworth Challenge, Jan. 28 - 30 at the Duckworth Centre and the Bison East Gym.

Last year, Harry Duckworth, President Emeritus of The University of Winnipeg and past Chancellor of the University of Manitoba, initiated the Duckworth Challenge for competition between the two universities.

The Duckworth Shield goes to the university with the most victories in designated games in men's and women's basketball and volleyball.

Women's and men's volleyball games will be held in the Bison East Gym, Thurs., Jan. 28 at 6:15 and 8:00 respectively. Women's and men's basketball games will be held in the Duckworth Centre, Sat., Jan. 30 at 6:15 p.m. and 8 p.m..

The University of Winnipeg Alumni Association will be selling chili or coney dogs and a beverage for $3, beginning at 5 p.m., Sat., Jan. 30. Following the game, the Alumni Association and the Faculty & Staff Club are is no doubt, however, that we shall be faced with a continuing need to be innovative academically, and in the service we provide to our students.

I would therefore urge that the curriculum review process move forward as quickly as possible, with special attention to the potential for integrating offerings with other departments, for helping students to see connections, and for the inclusion of new scholarship that crosses disciplinary boundaries and that is inclusive with respect to race and gender.

We have the ability to use our special focus on first rate undergraduate education to produce the most interesting, innovative and practical curriculum in the country, and I hope we can seize the opportunity to do so. At the same time, we shall be working on continuing to improve and make more efficient our administrative services.

I am delighted also to announce that, just before the holiday, we received two generous gifts totalling $100,000.

One is from the Garfield Weston Foundation/Real Canadian Superstore, directed toward our special fund for library acquisitions; the other is for the Erica and Arnold Rogers Fund, and will endow one new scholarship, as well as increasing the endowments of 16 others, of the Rogers Award for Excellence in Research and of the library fund.

I am most grateful to the Weston Foundation and to Erica and Arnold Rogers for their commitment to our University, especially in these times of increasing financial constraint.

Bonnycastle Lecture Welcomes Award-Winning Author

History Professor Olive Dickason will be the Bonnycastle Distinguished Lecturer on Jan. 28.

Professor Olive Dickason of the University of Alberta's History Department is the guest speaker at the Bonnycastle Lecture, Thurs., Jan. 28, 8 p.m. in Eckhardt-Gramatté Hall.

Dickason has written several books, including The Myth of the Savage and the Beginnings of French Colonialism in the Americas. This book received honourable mentions from both the Canadian Historical Association and the Alberta Writers' Guild in 1985, and from the Society for Colonial Wars (USA) in 1986. Dickason's book Indian Arts in Canada has won three awards for conception, design and presentation.

She is a member of the editorial board of American Indian Culture and Research Journal and sits on the board of directors of the Canadian Indian/Native Studies Association. In 1987 she co-chaired the conference "Women of the Métis Nation" in Edmonton and later attended the first ministers' conference in Ottawa as a delegate for Women of the Métis Nation, Métis Association of Alberta.

Dickason was born in Winnipeg and completed her early schooling here. A former freelance writer, she also worked as a reporter for the Winnipeg Free Press and held various positions with the Globe and Mail.

The University of Winnipeg Bonnycastle Distinguished Lecture was established in memory of Richard H. G. Bonnycastle, former chancellor of The University of Winnipeg.

training given by counselling officer Lesley Kepron (formerly employed by The University of Winnipeg). They were instructed in communication skills and crises intervention.

The group also gathered information to form a resource base of community services available to students. "Research was carried out in areas of concern to students, such as health issues, student poverty and human relations," states Waldman.

According to Waldman, "the program is modelled after many other successful peer counselling programs at the universities. We are here to provide support, not just information, to students."

The peer supporters are now located in the basement of Manitoba Hall (the former Women's Center) Room OG. For further information please call 786-9867.

Wesmen Win Again

The University of Winnipeg Wesmen have won the women's tournament in the annual Wesmen Labatt's Classic for the third consecutive year. The team was ranked No. 1 in the country going into the event. The No. 1 ranked men's basketball team was defeated by the University of Calgary in the final game.

"It's the first time in the 14-year history of the event that a team has won for three consecutive years," says Tom Kendall, women's basketball coach.

The most valuable player (MVP) award went to Michelle Chambers, a psychology major at The University of Winnipeg. "Michelle has been playing with us for five years, and this is her first tournament MVP," says Kendall. "It was just an outstanding tournament for Michelle," he adds.

"Three-year player Andrea Hutchins, who came to us from Newfoundland, was an all-star," says Kendall. Hutchins majors in Biology at the University.

"It was an excellent team effort," says Kendall of the Wesmen. They have a 16 - 1 record and are No. 1 in the country. Kendall points out that the team's only loss last year in league play was the Duckworth Challenge. That's one statistic the team is looking forward to changing this year.

Gallery Exhibition Reconsiders History

Brooks: Coming Home, which opened Tues., Jan. 12 in the University's Gallery 1C03, showcases the combined talents of University of Winnipeg photographer Peter Tittenberger and historian Walter Hildebrandt.

The exhibition combines written text with photographs of the Brooks Aqueduct. The aqueduct, 60 ft. high in places, was begun in 1908 to bring water from the Lake Newell reservoir across a dried-up river bed two miles wide. It brought water to an area of Alberta that was little more than a desert. The aqueduct remained operational for 65 years.

The Brooks Aqueduct was hailed as a major engineering feat in its day, but now hydro mega-projects like the aqueduct are being scrutinized for their environmental impact. Critics have begun to examine the consequences of these major alterations of nature.

In this exhibition the artists examine the visual and written narratives that dominate the historical record. Ideas of "progress" are reconsidered, and balanced against the voices of those people who constructed and lived in the communities around the aqueduct. Both artists consider a multiplicity of perspectives on what the aqueduct has meant for a wide variety of people.

Historical and photographic documentation is presented in a fragmented, tinted and altered form, then juxtaposed in an unorthodox sequence to unsettle and even jar the viewer/reader to reconsider both form and content.

Hildebrandt, an historian formerly with Parks Canada in Winnipeg, now lives and works in Calgary. He wrote the text for Sightings, a collection of poetry, historical documents and paintings about the relationship between aboriginal people and early settlers in Manitoba. It was short-listed last year for the McNally-Robinson prize for the Manitoba book of the year.

Tittenberger has been a photographer with The University of Winnipeg since 1976. He collaborated with Per Brask of the University's Theatre/Drama Department on a previous exhibition in Gallery 1C03 entitled "Still Stories." He curated an exhibition of photographs, "1959 Press Photography," which travelled extensively across Canada. Tittenberger has donated several of his photographs to the University's permanent collection.

The exhibition continues to Sat., Feb. 6. The gallery is open Mon. - Fri. 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sat. 1 - 4 p.m. Closed Sundays.

Last month the Malaysian Consul visited the University and met with several members of the senior administration.

University Starts Work-Study Program

As the recession worsens more students are finding it difficult or even impossible to stay in school. But The University of Winnipeg is trying to reverse this trend with its new Work-Study Program.

The program, funded by the University, allows full-time students who have used up the maximum student loan, "to use up their part-time earnings exemption in the Canada Student Loan Program," said Judy Dyck, director of awards and the organizer of this project.

Students are chosen for the Work-Study Program based on need and then hired for projects created by various university departments, said Dyck. Controller Herb McMullin noted that 54 projects have been approved.

Projects range from doing theatre equipment inventory to updating alumni records; from conducting student survey analyses for the Psychology Department to looking after the University's plant collection.

"We had a small committee look at all the projects and, basically, we were able to approve almost all of them," she said.

Notices were sent to about 550 students in early November and most of the approximately 150 who replied were hired and working by early December.

Dyck said the low response rate was due to the project's novelty. She said the students who did not reply had most likely found other work or were not able to afford the time to work. "If people knew about it in the fall, they might have planned for it," she said.

The idea for the program was first suggested by Dyck last spring when she was asked to provide a list of ways to supplement the Manitoba Student Financial Assistance Program. She noted that work-study programs are common in the United States and some Canadian provinces.

"I think the board and administration was quite keen on providing extra assistance [to students]... and this was an idea whose time had come," she said.

Voice Mail System Expands

Phase II of voice mail is underway as another 200 mailboxes are being added to the University system this month.

Training sessions for new users will be held during January, and employees' mailboxes will be set up within one or two days following their training. All of the new mailboxes will be activated by the end of January.

Mary Woods, one of our switchboard operators, has been trained by Manitoba Telephone System to instruct University employees in the use of voice mail.

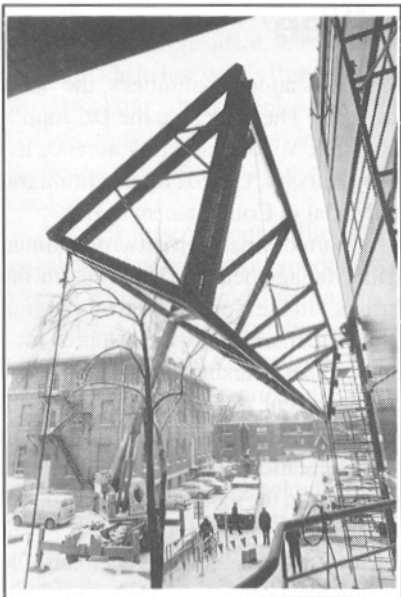

Once Phase II has been completed, essentially all full-time faculty members will have voice mail on their office telephones, as will a large number of administrative and support employees.

The impact of Phase II on the University's voice mail system will be monitored over the next few months before plans for further expansion of the system can be developed and finalized.

There are numerous telephones on campus that will probably not be given access to voice mail such as those in laboratories, meeting rooms, shared offices and reception areas. In many of these areas voice messaging is not required while in others, the University's Message Centre will continue to provide service as needed.

Last January Phase I of voice mail was introduced at the University with approximately 200 mailboxes allocated in various areas around the campus.

Anyone who already has voice mail on their office telephone and who missed the training sessions last year should call Lynn Jones at 786-9218 if they are interested in attending one of this year's sessions. Questions pertaining to the use of voice mail should be directed either to Mary Woods at the switchboard or to Lynn Jones.

Construction on the new Eckhardt-Gramatté Hall is now complete.

Religious Studies Professor Honoured for Community

Professor Carl Ridd, Department of Religious Studies, has been awarded the Commemorative Medal for the 125th Anniversary of Canadian Confederation.

The award is made to persons who have made a significant contribution to Canada, to their community or to their fellow Canadians.

A few of the organizations with which Ridd has served, some of which he helped start, include The Manitoba Council for International Cooperation, Project Peacemakers, Manitoba Energy Council, Canadian Society for the Study of Religion, the urban reform movement Winnipeg in the Nineties, Amnesty International and the Inter-Church Committee on Human Rights in Latin America.

Ridd's citation noted that he has achieved international recognition through his peace and justice work, especially in respect to Central America.

Correction

Academic Innovations Advisory Committee member Pauline Greenhill was incorrectly listed as a member of the Sociology Department in the last in edition. Greenhill is now coordinator of Women's Studies.

Addition

In the new campus telephone directory, a member of the Department of Mathematics and Statistics was inadvertently omitted. Terry Visentin, Room 6L06, ext. 9375, should have been listed.

Campus Notes

David Cheal, professor, Department of Sociology, completed a report for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation entitled "Family Types and Housing Affordability in Winnipeg." Copies of this paper will be available from the Canadian Housing Information Centre, Ottawa.

Cheal was invited to present a paper in Nov. at the Theory Construction and Research Methodology Workshop of the National Council on Family Relations (USA). His paper was "It's Now or Never: Modernity, Postmodernity, and the Politics of Periodization in Family Studies."

Associate Dean of Education Annabelle Mays has been appointed to the Equity and Equality Committee of the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union (CIAU). Director Aubrey Ferris, Recreation and Athletic Services, was appointed to the CIAU Board of Directors. Ferris is the Board's Great Plains Athletic Conference (GPAC) representative.

Rose Window Celebrates Centennial

The stained glass rose window which adorns the staircase of Bryce Hall is celebrating its centennial in 1993.

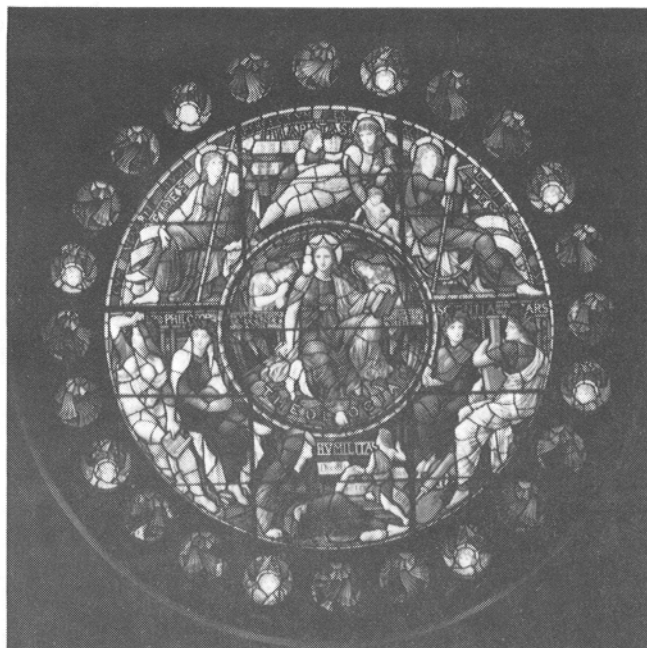

In 1893 the window was placed in Convocation Hall of Manitoba College (Ellice and Kennedy), one of the founding colleges of The University of Winnipeg. It was dedicated to the memory of Janet Skinner King, the wife of Dr. John Mark King, principal of Manitoba College from 1883-1899. Janet King had contributed significantly to the education and missionary work of the church. The window was moved to Bryce Hall in 1951 when the building was opened.

The window was designed in 1892 by Henry Holiday (1839-1927) of London. Recognized as a gifted artist in stained glass, his works were placed throughout England, Canada and the United States. Salisbury Cathedral, Children's Hospital in Toronto and St. Luke's Hospital in New York are some of the more notable placements.

The long history of our stained glass rose window contains some mystery and intrigue. In 1973, Alice Hamilton, associate professor of English at The University of Winnipeg, discovered an illustration of our window in Holiday's book on stained glass. Surprisingly, Holiday identified the window as one belonging to a theological college in New Jersey.

Was the window at The University of Winnipeg a copy of the New Jersey window or had Holiday just forgotten that he had sent it to us?

Hamilton wrote a letter to Stained Glass magazine which described the confusion, but it wasn't until 1982 that the matter was brought to the attention of J. Eric Sandberg of the Physical Plant Department at Drew University, Madison, New Jersey.

A craftsman at Drew, who was restoring a 10 foot circular window which had previously been in storage, recalled Hamilton's letter and photograph of our window.

An investigation by the research librarian at Drew shed some light on the mystery. In 1890, the window was presented to the Drew Theological Seminary by Mrs. Cornell as a tribute to her husband John B. Cornell, trustee of the seminary from 1872-1887. It was concluded that since the Drew University window pre-dated our window by two years, ours was a copy.

Senate Report

Senate Discusses Proposal for New Committee

The main topic of discussion at the December Senate meeting was the executive's recommendation to establish a new Academic Planning Committee. Several comments were made about the membership of this proposed committee. Anyone else wishing to express their views should do so by communicating with David Gagan, vice-president (academic).

It is expected that a motion to establish the Academic Planning Committee will be made early in 1993. If approved, the executive has further suggested that the current Academic Development and Curriculum Committee be disbanded as soon as the new committee becomes operational.

The Ad Hoc Committee to Review the Structure of Senate Committees has begun meeting and will continue its work in January. This committee, consisting of five Senators, was established to review and make recommendations concerning membership of Senate, the composition of committees, and who should report to Senate and through which channels.

In addition to discussions about committees, the Senate approved several new awards. These include the Dr. John M. Woods Entrance Scholarship, UWSA Margaret Laurence Bursary, UWSA Gabrielle Roy Bursary, UWSA Recent Immigrant Bursary and the Wesley Medal (a Collegiate award).

As well, the Senate supported expansion in two Continuing Education programs. In the Management Studies program, they approved two new offerings. In the Special Interest program, three new offerings in the Armchair Series were approved.

In her remarks, Senate Chair Marsha Hanen, president of the University, noted some recent prominent visitors to the campus including Education Minister Rosemary Vodrey. The chair also stated that the presentation to the University Education Review Commission, held on the morning of Dec. 10, went very well. Senate was thanked for their input.

Please note: the January Senate meeting has been cancelled and the next Senate meeting has been rescheduled to Feb. 9.

University Merges Two Departments

Next month the separate departments of Computer Services and Technical Services will amalgamate to form a new department - Technical Support Services.

According to George Tomlinson, academic assistant (planning) to the president, the merger is based on recommendations made in last year's Report of the President's Committee on the Future of the University. He said that it will help the University better address its needs, not only in the area of computing, but also in information management and institutional analysis.

"It will improve our ability to conceive and plan our computing requirements in a coordinated, comprehensive and integrated manner," said Tomlinson.

To date, the University has operated a traditional "mainframe" service with centralized data storage and programming located in the Department of Computer Services. However, with the widespread availability of personal computers, the perception and practice of computing has been radically altered. Also, with technological developments, computer power and storage capabilities have increased tremendously.

As a result, the 600 plus microcomputers within the University have assumed many of the computing tasks traditionally housed on a mainframe, explained Tomlinson. This applies not only to administrative functions but also to academic programs.

According to Tomlinson, one of the most important tasks of the new department will be to create a campus-wide communications system. This set-up will circulate institutional data and information.

"It is proposed that the highest priority be assigned to the creation of a fully integrated student information system. This would improve registration procedures as well as our ability to do institutional analysis and planning," said Tomlinson, adding that he expects the project to take approximately two years.

Overall, the Technical Support Services Department will be responsible for the provision of support and service to the University in a variety of technical areas. The department will operate as a user-motivated, service oriented organization.

Tomlinson states that personnel in the User Support and Training Services division of the new department will be available as the first point of contact for users. "This represents an important new initiative because it clearly identifies a source of technical assistance for people."
