New Chairman Brings Several Perspectives to Board

Harvey Secter, the new Chairman of the Board of Regents, brings both the perspectives of the businessman and returning student to the position.

After selling his chain of women's clothing stores which included Ricki's, Mannequin, and Off Broadway, Secter, who has been a Board member for six years, decided that there was no better time than the present to pursue his goal of attending Law school.

"It's kind of neat struggling through the challenge of university with people young enough to be your children," he admits.

Secter believes that "lay" people like himself are instrumental in bringing outside perspectives to the issues with which the Board must grapple.

"By bringing new people to the Board, we bring new friends to the University," he notes, adding that outsiders often have misconceptions about university life. Once they see for themselves the cost of education, the need for expanded facilities, and the significance of investment to maintain present equipment, they become much-needed

Like his predecessors, Secter hopes to continue to enhance the trend of streng-

THE UNIVERSITY OF WINNIPEG

VOL.8 NO.1

Message from the President

It's Back to School with Resolutions for the New Year

For all of us closely associated with universities, September always seems the appropriate time to celebrate the New Year. We return to our duties with renewed energy and with fresh thoughts about what needs to be done and how we should be doing it.

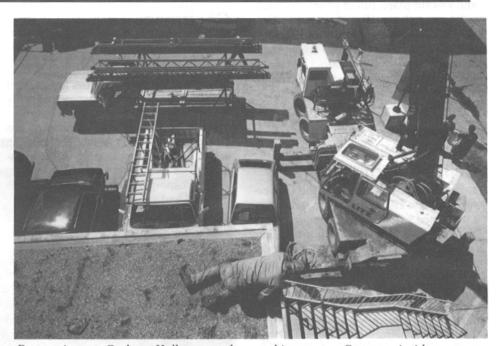

I hope you have all managed, over the summer, to fit in some time for rest, for enjoyment of family and friends, for the things that give you pleasure and sustenance.

Over the past month or so I have taken some time to reflect on the state of the University, on developments over the eleven months since I became a part of it and directions for the 1990–91 academic year and beyond.

The priority that we placed last year on internal communication must, I think, continue and be developed further. I intend to resume my visits to departments almost immediately, and to continue to use what I learn to help to facilitate improvements where they are needed.

I know that many of you have been inconvenienced by the summer construction program, and we are all grateful for your patience. I hope you will soon be settled in more comfortable and healthful quarters, and that better offices and common spaces will contribute to the quality of all our interactions.

Computer communications should soon be vastly improved, and I trust you will continue to keep me informed on how this is working. We are working on improved institutional data gathering and I expect real progress in this area this year, together with improved dissemination of information throughout the University. Work continues on improved student recruitment, service and retention, the results of which should be beneficial for our students and our programs.

The report of the Task Force on Accessibility will be available soon and we shall need to consider its recommendations.

We shall also be considering a new policy on sexual harassment together with new procedures, and we must give renewed attention to our educational responsibilities in this and related areas.

Perhaps the most important institutional activity underway, from a long term point of view, is the work of the Committee on the Future of the University. As you know, the sub-committees have been working over the summer, and we shall be resuming our full committee work shortly. Many of you have already contributed ideas, and I hope you will all want to participate as we progress. We welcome your suggestions and involvement.

I remain deeply concerned about the financial situation of the University. Our grant was again well below what is required to enable us to fulfil our mandate at an appropriate level of quality, so we continue to be faced with difficult decisions in order to balance the budget.

We have made our case for 1991–92 to the Universities Grants Commission in very strong terms, and I intend to continue to devote a substantial amount of time to fund development. I hope a number of you will want to play a role in this area, and I would be grateful if you would drop me a note if you have ideas you think we should pursue or if you think you could help.

Happily, in spite of our funding problems, this university remains an exciting and vibrant place, full of people committed to excellence. I wish for us all an exciting and rewarding year with success in all our academic, cultural and athletic endeavors.

thening the links between The University of Winnipeg and its surrounding community. While many universities are isolated physically and have been accused of being isolated psychologically, the centrally-located University of Winnipeg has worked aggressively to make itself an active and meaningful part of the community. In Secter's opinion, The University of Winnipeg doesn't have the same physical and psychological distance.

Harvey Secter: businessman, Law student and Chairman of the Board of Regents.

"It bridges the gaps that have historically existed in the community," he says.
"That's a tradition that we would certainly look to enhance and maintain."

The University of Winnipeg, like all post-secondary institutions, is faced with the critical problem of funding. "In times of government restraint, it becomes an added challenge for everybody," notes Secter.

In the face of an extended period of restraint, the University must find ways of maintaining its standards of excellence while dealing with issues like the increased access program.

"Accessibility isn't just financial or academic," says Secter. "It's other things as well." As the University attracts more single mothers and people with disabilities, physical accessibility and day care become issues.

When Secter attained his Commerce degree in the '60s, students were usually of the same age and socio-economic background. As a Law student, Secter himself is a perfect example of the '90s student, being anything but typical.

According to Secter, "That will pose new challenges and opportunities as we look to provide service to a potentially more diverse population."

As Board of Regents chairman, Secter is ready to meet any challenge that comes his way.

Take the Skywalk to Relaxation & Education

This autumn Winnipeggers will find another reason to use the Skywalk system as the Winnipeg Centennial Library and The University of Winnipeg Division of Continuing Education cooperate to present a series of noon-hour lectures and concerts.

The Skywalk Series is designed to fit neatly into the lunchtime slot of those who work and shop downtown and will provide opportunities for relaxation and education. Each program is one half-hour in length and will commence at 12:15 p.m. The series begins on Sept. 12 and will run on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays until Dec. 7.

There will be two lecture series – Psychology on Wednesdays and Perceptions of Reality on Fridays. University of Winnipeg faculty will cover such topics as "Child Day Care: What the Research Tells Us," "Variable Stars and Backyard Astronomy" and "Stress and Anxiety."

Concerts will be held on Thursdays. Featured performers include Shirley Sawatsky, piano; Paul Hammer, classical guitar, and Susan Hammer, recorder; and Richard Turner, harp.

All lectures and concerts will be held in the 2nd floor auditorium, off the Skywalk in the Winnipeg Centennial Public Library, 251 Donald. Admission is free.

Concerts are supported with the assistance of the Music Performance Trust Fund.

See "Coming Events" for details on the lectures and concerts.

Building Renovations Complete After a Summer of Moving

Ashdown Hall has been refurbished and given a new life. Over the summer months, approximately 50 faculty members were located in makeshift, temporary offices around campus while the second and third floors of Ashdown Hall were renovated.

In addition to the removal of asbestos from the ceilings, a new heating, ventilation and air conditioning system was installed and offices were renovated. Although the English and History Departments have moved back into the area, they are operating out of boxes and working at exam tables, as furnishings for the upgraded area have not yet arrived.

While the Ashdown project was underway, the fourth floor of Graham Hall was undergoing a major overhaul with the installation of a new heating, ventilation and air conditioning system.

The space is now used by the Faculty of Arts and Science as faculty offices.

Both the Ashdown and Graham Hall projects were made possible through funding from the Capital Campaign and the Manitoba Universities Development Fund at a total cost of $880,000.

In the Collegiate Division, the Biology and Chemistry laboratories were refurbished and a new micro-computer lab was installed in Wesley Hall. The total cost of the Collegiate project was approximately $480,000. Funding was provided by the Capital Campaign, the Collegiate Division and the University's operating reserve.

The University's Alumni Association hosted last June's post-Convocation reception on the front lawn of the campus. Several alumni members volunteered to serve the punch (l-r): Elaine Hickerson '57, Lorraine Walker, Brian Daly '86, Director of Alumni and Advancement, Bruce Walker '75, Keith Black '60, Spencer Clements '75, and Diane Phillips '69.

New Features in the Works for IN EDITION

In Edition is starting off the 1990-91 academic year with a few new features.

Articles from University of Winnipeg President Marsha Hanen, similar to the one on the front page of this issue, will appear on a semi-regular basis. As well, we will be starting a column by Board of Regents Chairman Harvey Secter; regular reports on faculty and staff changes; and a question-and-answer column on employee relations matters.

These changes are in response to a readership survey of In Edition conducted by the University's Public Relations Office last May.

The survey revealed that the most popular features are the calendar of coming events, news on major administrative matters, articles on upcoming events and reports on faculty and staff achievements.

Respondents also said they were quite interested in news on academic programs; employee benefits, promotions, retirements and new staff; Board of Regents and Senate decisions; and achievements of University students.

Survey results were tabulated from 80 responses from an initial random sample of 112 readers. The sample included faculty and staff of The University of Winnipeg as well as Board of Regents members and "friends" who regularly receive In Edition.

Overall, the survey showed that people view In Edition as an important source of information about their workplace. More than 90 per cent said they read In Edition most of the time or often and the majority indicated they read all or most of it. Of those surveyed, about 90 per cent said they were very satisfied or somewhat satisfied with the newsletter.

Two regular sections, "Coming Events" and "Campus Notebook," seem to be features that people would like to see retained and, if possible, expanded. Both of them, however, depend a great deal on submissions from faculty and staff.

We hope we can count on you to keep the Public Relations Office informed about upcoming events and to report your achievements such as publications and presentations to us. As well, story ideas, especially on people and research, are always welcome.

In Edition readers want to know about your events and accomplishments, so don't forget to tell us!

Catch Up On Summer Staff Changes

The following are some of the major staff changes that occurred over the summer:

BOOKSTORE

Manager Wendy Shand resigned and was replaced by Diana Roscoe in July. Computer sales representative Bill Karras also left his position and Jeff Price came on board.

CONTINUING EDUCATION

The new Dean of Continuing Education is Curtis Nordman. Also new at 491 Portage are Wayne Hykaway, Program Director/ Financial Manager, and Holly Sanness, who replaced Enriqueta Caguioa as a receptionist. Caguioa is now at the Interfaith Pastoral Institute on campus. Wanda Fowler, Instructor Liaison Clerk at Continuing Education, resigned in June.

PHYSICAL PLANT

Director Alf Cupeiro is on extended sick leave. In his absence, Norm Loat has been named Acting Director of the department.

RECREATION AND ATHLETICS

Paula Mandryk is now the Marketing and Facility Assistant, replacing Maureen McFarlane who has left the University. Mandryk's former position, Office Assistant 4, has been taken over by Ellen Wiens from the Student Records Office. Joanne Brisson has just begun her Office Assistant 2 position in the Therapy Centre. Jenny Partridge is now Community Access Assistant.

FACULTY CHAIRS

In Physics, Peter Miller has replaced Brent Stearns as Chair of the department. George Tomlinson is now Acting Chair of Chemistry, replacing Harold Hutton. In Economics, Hugh Grant is stepping in for Sohrab Abizadeh as Acting Chair.

UNIVERSITY CANDIDATES IN THE PROVINCIAL ELECTION are Jim Carr, Continuing Education, running for the Liberals in Crescentwood, and History Professor Don Bailey, the NDP candidate in the Osborne riding.

Department Reps Top UWSA'S List of Priorities

Kyle Briggs, President of The University of Winnipeg Students' Association (UWSA), is full of energy and ideas for the 1990-91 academic year.

His top priority will be to promote the already strong student-professor relationships on campus. "We have very good relationships at this University. They are of an egalitarian and professional nature," he said.

One way he will focus on this important relationship will be with student department representatives. "Department reps will become very important in the 1990-91 academic year. This will enable departments to have more direct feedback from students," said Briggs, who is currently working on a BA in Geography.

The UWSA hopes to establish a rapport with faculty in order that both the academic and social sides of student life on campus will be enhanced. "We will be asking for more input and ideas from the professors as well as their continued help in sponsoring UWSA events," said

Briggs.

According to the new President, the UWSA will be starting fresh in the fall of 1990, with some reorganization and a new staff. The number of Vice Presidents has been cut to two from three with duties being re-distributed amongst the President and the new VPs. Richard Stuart is the new VP Advocate, Christian Okotcha will serve as VP of Student Services and the Internal Coordinator is Colleen McKenty.

Briggs' former postion as VP Academic enabled him to see a lot of the University. "I was able to see how everything fits together, and I was fortunate to be able to see the function of the University's administration," he said.

When asked why he wanted to be President of the UWSA, Briggs said, "I feel I can contribute something to The University of Winnipeg, given the experience I have at this institution. I also think this is a top-notch institution."

Employees Ask . . .

Q. When will the Canada Savings Bonds purchased through payroll deduction last year be available and when will the new campaign begin?

A. As the University's deduction period is only spread over 10 months, your last deduction was on Aug. 31. Once the payment has been received by the bank, they check the registration information on the bonds for accuracy. The bonds are then forwarded to our Payroll Office for distribution. Employees will be notified when the bonds are ready to be picked up in person.

The new campaign will start when the new interest rates are announced in mid-October. Applications will be forwarded from the Employee Relations Office to all employees eligible to participate. Last year 150 employees purchased in excess of $208,000 worth of Canada Savings Bonds.

Continuing Education Plans to Increase Partnerships

In the eyes of Curtis Nordman, the new Dean of Continuing Education, the future of that division of The University of Winnipeg is in developing partnerships.

"We're the entrepreneurial wing of the University," he says, noting that Continuing Education should be market sensitive. "We have to get a much better sense of what's required out there."

By forming partnerships with businesses, government, cultural groups, and other post-secondary institutions, Continuing Education could tailor its courses to address the needs of the outside community. Nordman hopes to explore the feasibility of this idea through pilot programs with business and government.

"We have to figure out what our role is," Nordman explains, adding that he believes Continuing Education should serve the community.

He suspects that Continuing Education may be the place for people to update their skills after their degree so that they will be ready to meet the demands of the changing job market. According to Nordman, "We have to be preparing people for other opportunities in their lives." To do this, Continuing Education will have to develop the courses which people will need in changing circumstances.

"We're moving into an incredibly competitive age," declares Nordman. "Highly skilled people will be the backbone of our success in world markets." By responding to the needs of the business community, Continuing Education could help people become flexible enough to meet future challenges.

"Development of an overall plan is the first really big thing that we have to tackle," he says. Currently, Continuing Education is in the process of reviewing its present role and curriculum, defining new directions, and developing strategies for the future.

By changing the title from Director of Continuing Education to Dean, the University has raised the profile of the division quite dramatically and strengthened its commitment to Continuing Education.

"We've been given a stronger mandate than in the past," says Nordman. "We have to live up to this."

Contemporary Ukrainian Art Exhibition Comes to Manitoba for the First Time

Manitobans will have a rare opportunity to view contemporary art from Ukraine in Synergos 1, Sept. 14 – Oct. 21, in The University of Winnipeg's Gallery 1C03.

According to co-curator Olya Marko, the exhibition reflects the new openness which exists in the Soviet Union. "The works are all new and many deal with contemporary issues and religious imagery not seen in the past," explained Marko. "Until recently, artists didn't do such work or if they did, they didn't publicize it."

Synergos 1 contains 86 pieces by 43 different artists from Ukraine. The collection features mostly prints, but other types of art such as watercolours and pastel drawings are also shown.

Four of the artists from Ukraine will be in Winnipeg from Sept. 23 to Oct. 5 to share their perspectives on art and life in Ukraine.

This exhibition is the first phase of an art exchange project between Ukraine and Manitoba. Next September, Synergos 2 will feature the works of Ukrainian Manitoban artists. The exhibition will open here to coincide with the 100th anniversary of the arrival of the first Ukrainian pioneers to Canada. It will then travel to Ukraine.

The Synergos art exhibitions were initiated by the Manitoba Ukrainian Arts Council. The University of Winnipeg will host Synergos 1 with the support of Visual Arts Manitoba and all levels of government. The curators are Olya Marko and Doug Melnyk.

See "Coming Events" for gallery hours.

Get Your Special Event Off to a Good Start

Do you want to hold a special lecture, an extra class or set up a display in front of Riddell Hall? The following procedure for booking space at The University of Winnipeg will help you get your event off to a good start.

To avoid disappointment, the first rule-of-thumb is to book space as early as possible – at least 72 hours in advance.

Most room and space bookings are done through two people: Cindy Lewkiw in the Dean's Office and Marilyn Lockwood in University Relations.

Lewkiw arranges rooms for all regularly scheduled day and evening classes and controls all classroom bookings (including the classrooms in the Athletic Centre) prior to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Lockwood looks after all bookings for space required on weekends and Monday through Friday after 6 p.m., with the exception of regular evening classes. As well, she accepts all requests for Theatre 3C00, Room 2M70, Riddell Hall Cafeteria, the Board Room and all open areas.

The Private Dining Room (1C21) is booked through the President's Office. All bookings in the Athletic Centre with the exception of daytime classroom space are handled by Paula Mandryck, Marketing and Facilities Assistant.

Clean-Air Campus

The University of Winnipeg is a cleanair campus. With the exception of two designated smoking areas, the entire campus (including private offices) is now smoke free. Designated smoking areas are the Lockhart Hall Buffeteria and the south foyer entrance to Riddell Hall.

University Events Just A Phone Call Away

A listing of coming events at The University of Winnipeg is now just a phone call away with the new "Talking Yellow Pages" system.

Introduced by the Manitoba Telephone System in June, the "Talking Yellow Pages" allows people to use their touchtone phones to find out what's happening in Winnipeg. There are separate programs (4-digit numbers) for such areas as theatre, concerts, sports and historic sites.

Give the University's line a try. Call 784–9000 for the "Talking Yellow Pages" general line. Then press 4075 to access the University's line. You now have four options: athletics, admis- sions, registration or coming events. Each program will give you the latest information on what's happening at The University of Winnipeg. (Thanks to Monica Wood, Recruitment, and Bonnie Archibald, President's Office, for being the "voice" of the University.)

Unique History Course For Seniors

A unique course at The University of Winnipeg proves that attending classes can be as much fun as going to a concert.

"History through Music," a non-credit seniors course offered through the Continuing Education Division, is an enjoyable combination of informative lectures and live musical performances by well-known, professional musicians.

"The course is innovative and unique because of the live performances," said Harry Strub, coordinator of the music program at The University of Winnipeg, "And the lecturer is one of the best at the University. Victor Batzel, Chair of the History Department, was the first winner of the Clifford J. Robson Award for Excellence in Teaching."

According to Strub, the course exposes students to an exceptional educational and cultural experience. Students in the course examine the social and cultural aspects of historical periods known for producing great composers and great music.

This year's concerts will feature local and international musicians such as Eric Lussier, considered by many to be Canada's best harpsichordist, the Epos piano trio from Sweden, The Vancouver Wind Trio, and the duo of mezzo soprano Karen Jensen and lutenist Richard Burleson who open the concert series upon their return to Winnipeg following a triumphant European summer tour.

In addition to performing, the musicians will talk about the music and their instruments. Refreshments will be served after some performances, in order to give students an opportunity to meet the musicians.

"History through Music" runs as two half courses from September to December, and January to April, totalling 10 classical concerts and 10 lectures. It will be held at the Winnipeg Art Gallery, which is co-sponsoring the course. No specialized knowledge of music is required in order to enroll.

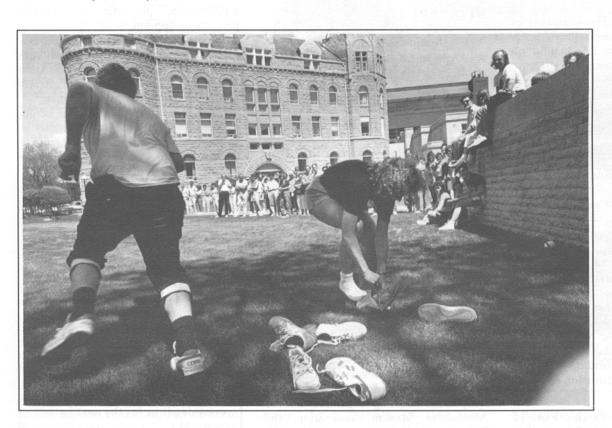

For more information or to register, call Darlene Frederickson at 786-9138.

Two teams (men vs. women) went toe-to-toe in a "find your sneakers in the pile" relay, one of many University-organized events for national Sneaker Day last May.

Participants got pretty sneaky - sabotaging their opponent's shoelaces or throwing their runners over the Rock. The women were victorious.
