Mind Helps Establish New Micro-Computer Lab

JAN 27 1992

A generous donation from Mind Computers to The University of Winnipeg has helped transform Room 3C12 (Centennial Hall) into a first-class micro-computer laboratory.

The new 31-unit facility includes 20 units (retail $40,000) donated by Mind Computer Products. The University added 10 units, one unit for an instructor, some printers and a file server as well as colour monitors. Both the Faculty of Arts and Science and the Division of Continuing Education have been involved in this endeavour.

According to Don Kerr, Associate Dean of Budgeting and Planning, the lab will be shared by Arts, Science and Continuing Education students. "It will give many University departments that don't currently have their own computer facilities access to top-line equipment," he said. "We can't provide all departments with their own labs, but Room 3C12 will give each of them some computer time."

The lab also represents a chance for the University to further develop its relationship with Mind Computers. "We are very pleased with this opportunity to collaborate with a local manufacturer," said Michael McIntyre,

Vice- President (Academic) Steps Down

Ross McCormack has left his position as Vice-President (Academic) of The University of Winnipeg. The Executive of the Board of Regents approved McCormack's request to step down from the position a few months earlier than originally planned. His second five-year term as Vice-President (Academic) was scheduled to end in August, 1992.

Using a new description of the Vice-President (Academic) position recommended by the Futures Committee and approved by the board, a Search Committee is currently working to fill the post. The committee is expected to make an announcement within the next few months and the new Vice-President (Academic) will likely take office this summer. In the meantime, Herb Mays, Director of Research Administration, will serve as Acting Vice-President (Academic).

Exhibit Traces History of Berens River

"Omimisiipi: Faces of Berens River" will be on display Feb. 4-28 in The University of Winnipeg Library, 4th floor, mezzanine.

The Berens River region east of Lake Winnipeg has a rich and complex human history. Aboriginal people, British and Montreal fur traders, missionaries, surveyors, anthropologists, and others have travelled its countless waterways and portages, viewing it and one another from many different angles, recording their experiences in their own ways.

This exhibit juxtaposes some of their ways of seeing and the ways that they were seen, through images, texts, and artifacts from the historical Special Collections of the University.

The Berens River exhibit draws attention to several occasions of note. The publication of anthropologist A. Irving Hallowell's long-lost book from the 1960s, The Ojibwa of Berens River, Manitoba (edited by Jennifer S.H. Brown), and the Fifth Biennial Rupert's Land Research Centre Colloquium (Feb. 6-9, 1991) with its emphasis on fur trade and Native history provide the central theme. As well, the 25th anniversary of The University of Winnipeg is an appropriate time to display some unique historical documents, pictures, and artifacts from its Special Collections of historical materials.

The displays include, besides some privately held items, books and documents from the Rare Book Room of the Library and the United Church Archives; images from the Western Canada Pictorial Index; and items from the ethnological collections of the Department of Anthropology.

They present three themes. The people and communities of Berens River appear, largely through the photographs of A.I. Hallowell in the 1930s. Northern winter travel is evoked, in accord with the theme Rupert's Land in Winter, which was chosen for the Rupert's Land Colloquium and the companion events of the Festival du Voyageur (Feb. 7-15). And third, a series of images and texts offers commentary on the religious encounters which intensified as the Saulteaux people along the Berens River met and evaluated the Methodist missionary challenges that began in the 1870s.

University faculty and staff as well as the public are welcome to attend the exhibit opening on Feb. 7 and to view the displays during Library hours throughout February. See "Coming Events" for details.

Telephone Directory Update

The recent upgrade to the University's telephone system has resulted in a few changes to numbers listed in the internal telephone directory. Some new numbers were added to eliminate shared extensions, while many others represent a change in the type of service for that line.

A number in the "2000" series cannot be dialed directly from an external telephone number although it can be dialed from any internal number. It can be used to dial both internal and external numbers, unless a department has requested that a certain number have restricted dialing access (e.g. no access to long distance or internal access only).

Please note these changes in your directory for future reference:

Learn From the Best and Share With the Rest

Rather than take credit for the incredible success of the sports teams he's assisted, Cal Botterill, Professor of Physical Activity and Sports Studies at The University of Winnipeg, sees his work as an opportunity to "learn from the best and share with the rest."

As Team Canada's sports psychology consultant, Botterill helped the team's players mentally prepare for the tremendous challenge ahead of them. Team Canada skated away with the Canada Cup.

Botterill worked with the Canadian National Basketball Team for the World Student Games in Edmonton in 1983; they beat the United States team in the semi-finals and went on to beat Yugoslavia in the finals. He also worked with the Canadian Junior Curling Team in 1985. The team went on to Perth, Scotland and won the world championship.

In 1987-88, Team Canada's coach, Mike Keenan, was coach of the NHL's Philadelphia Flyers. His team was in a terrible slump so he called in Botterill. The Flyers went on to play 14 unbeaten games.

"Great athletes like Wayne Gretzky have much more than just physical skill," says Botterill. "The mental skills and attitudes you find in top athletes are the same ones you find in survivors—burn victims, for example, who have battled life and death situations."

"Visualization - What You See Is What You Get" is a video created by Botterill that illustrates just how to achieve peak mental performance. The video is used not only by coaches and athletes, but by medical rehabilitation programs and businesses as well.

"Visualization is the skill of using your imagination to prepare for a key event; it doesn't matter whether the event is a major sports competition or a business meeting," he explains. "Really skilled they face. This ability to focus positively can be a valuable tool in business and everyday life, as well as in sports. It can be critical in health psychology and medical rehabilitation.

Perhaps we can all take a tip from Cal Botterill. Instead people like Gretzky can do more than just imagine; they can almost hear and smell the environment. They prepare by getting up earlier, by taking time to focus positively on each of the key demands they'll face."

Cal Botterill: "Great athletes like Wayne Gretzky have much more than just physical skill."

Botterill explains that if an athlete is injured, complete physical recovery alone is never enough to put him or her back on top; they need to be at their psychological peak in order to meet the demands of making all those New Year's resolutions (have you really quit smoking, stopped spending money, lost five kilograms?) we can learn from the best. We can recognize the positive possibilities in our lives and focus on healthy bodies, sound financial planning and the physical and mental energy needed to face the challenges each day brings.

Two Special Lectures in February

This year's Distinguished Lecture Series celebrates The University of Winnipeg's 25th anniversary with two guest speakers in February.

The Laird Lecture, Tues., Feb. 11 at 8 p.m., will feature Glyndwr Williams, Visiting Professor of History at Simon Fraser University.

Williams will speak on "Myths, Mirage and Illusions: Explorers and the Canadian West Before 1800."

Williams, a Professor of History at the University of London in England, is the former editor of the Hudson's Bay Records Society. He has done research in the areas of the Canadian fur trade, the history of the Hudson's Bay Company and native-colonial relations in Australia.

The Bonnycastle Lecture, Thurs., Feb. 13 at 8 p.m., will feature Rayna Green from the National Museum of American History in the Smithsonian Institution. Her lecture is "I'm glad Columbus wasn't looking for Turkey: An Indian view from the shore in 1992."

Green, who has a PhD in Folklore and American Studies, has many books and essays on American Indians and American culture to her credit.

This year The University of Winnipeg's Distinguished Lecture Series will be included in the programming of the Festival du Voyageur. The Festival and the Rupert's Land Research Centre Colloquium, held in Winnipeg, acknowledge that 1992 marks 500 years of European and Aboriginal interaction on this continent with the theme of "Fur Trade in Winter."

University of Winnipeg President Marsha Hanen noted McCormack's "lengthy and distinguished administrative service to the University." "Dr. McCormack has contributed significantly to the academic development of our university. He has played a key role in helping us to establish important partnerships with universities, agencies and institutions throughout the world," she said.

McCormack, an alumnus of this University, has held the Vice-President (Academic) position for nearly 10 years, a period which included five months as Acting President in 1988-89. Since starting his career at The University of Winnipeg in 1968, he has become a full Professor of History. He served as Assistant Dean of Arts and Science from 1979 to 1982.

The outgoing Vice-President has been a Visiting Fellow at the Institute of Commonwealth Studies in the University of London and organized or participated in many international conferences. He has published a number of articles and two books, one of which was a runner-up for the Macdonald Prize. His research interests are migration and ethnicity. McCormack has been president of the Canadian Labour History Association and a member of the Canadian Historical Association Council. His community service has included the chairmanship of the Manitoba Historic Sites Board and membership on the Manitoba Cultural Policy Review Commission and the Board of Governors of the Winnipeg Health Sciences Centre.

McCormack will be taking vacation followed by administrative leave. He will return to The University of Winnipeg as a faculty member in the History Dept. in 1993.

Voice Mail Is Here

Voice Mail, the latest upgrading to The University of Winnipeg's communication system, is here.

Ask half a dozen people what it is and chances are they'll reply: "It's just like an answering machine, isn't it?" While Voice Mail is as easy to use as an answering machine, the comparison is a limited one - rather like comparing a typewriter to a computer.

Voice Mail is an electronic messaging system that makes communication, both inside and outside an organization, fast, easy and dependable. It allows the user to do the following:

- listen to, record, edit and send messages
- send a message to more than one person at the same time
- play back messages either at your desk or from any touchtone telephone.

"In our company, it eliminated the problem of telephone tag almost immediately," says Michael Hill, Director of Marketing at Peat Marwick Thorne, and Chair of the Board of Regents' Development Committee at The University of Winnipeg.

"Answering machines tended to be a repository for the 'Hi, this is John, call me,' type of message," Hill adds. "With the right Voice Mail message you invite your caller to accomplish more than just leaving a message."

Lynn Jones, Assistant to VP (Administration), explains a few of the advantages of the new system. "The system is in place 24 hours a day, rather than just 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.," she says.

"One useful feature of Voice Mail is that you can compose a message, set up a list of people you want to send the memo to, and then tell the system to put the message in all their 'mailboxes' instantly," explains Jones. "Furthermore, you can listen to a message from someone else and then forward that message to any number of people just by pushing a button." A light on your telephone or, in some cases, a "stutter" dial tone indicates there is a message in your mailbox.

Voice Mail will be in place at the University by Jan. 27, with 200 telephones having Voice Mail capability. According to Jones, there are plans to expand beyond this number, but no dates are fixed at this point. "There are four training sessions a day, from Jan. 17 to Jan. 24, lasting 1 hour and 15 minutes each," says Jones. "This will give everyone the opportunity to learn to use this system to its greatest advantage."

Every evening the "25 years" sign on Wesley Hall is switched on to celebrate the University's anniversary in 1992.

Feminist Scholar Visits University

The Canadian Studies and Women's Studies Programs at The University of Winnipeg are co-sponsoring the visit of interdisciplinary feminist scholar and activist Lindsay Dorney. This event is assisted by funding from the Association for Canadian Studies' Intercultural/Interregional Enrichment Program, made possible thanks to the Secretary of State of Canada.

Professor Dorney of the University of Waterloo, Ontario will visit The University of Winnipeg during the first week of February. She is a co-author of the Canadian Women's Studies textbook Changing Patterns: Women in Canada (1988), and former Director of Women's Studies at the University of Waterloo.

While she's here, Dorney will present guest lectures on her current research on autobiographies and autobiographical novels by Canadian women of colour, and on her work with the Citizen's Advisory Committee on the Quality of Life in the Regional Municipality of Waterloo. She'll talk to Women's Studies and Canadian Studies courses at the University, as well as to a Women's Studies course at the University of Manitoba.

Her lecture "Where are the Canadian Women Heroes?" will be open to the public. It's scheduled for Wed., Feb. 5 from 7-9 p.m. in Room 4M37. Professor Dorney will also be available for consultation and discussion.

Call Pauline Greenhill at 786-9752 for further information.

Underside of Victorian Life Exposed

Convocation Hall will reverberate for seven days this February with the laughter and the outrage of the strong-minded women who worked the gutting sheds of slaughter-houses in Victorian London, as The University of Winnipeg Theatre Department presents Sarah Daniels' humane, hilarious, and sharply political play, The Gut Girls.

The Gut Girls is set in the gutting sheds of the wharf-side slaughter house at Deptford Cattle Market; the play shows the sudden change in the situation the "gut girls" face when the job that has brought them scorn, but a remarkable degree of independence and dignity, is suddenly made illegal.

"Daniels' play is a brilliant political parable," says director Reg Skene. "It is humane and outrageously funny, but it is also angry and absolutely unsparing in its analysis of class oppression and the situation of women, both in Victorian society and today."

"The gut girls themselves are a wonderful theatrical creation. They do a job that brings them the ridicule of every third-rate music-hall comedian and which enlists the sympathy of every middle-class liberal, but they enjoy an independence denied 'respectable women,' and the attempt to 'save' them by taming them into domestic servants brings them personal disaster, opening up the full range of issues which rage within the women's movement today."

The Gut Girls features members of The University of Winnipeg third-year acting class. Performances are Feb. 7-14 (except Sun., Feb. 9) at 8 p.m.

The final play of The University of Winnipeg's 1991-92 season will be Timberlake Wertenbaker's Our Country's Good, to be presented at the Gas Station Theatre, March 27-Apr. 3.

Admission to University of Winnipeg shows is free. For reservations, call 786-9402. For further information, please call Patty Hawkins at 786-9292.

How to Make your Butterflies Fly in Formation

10 Tips from Toastmasters

Nervousness, speech anxiety, stage fright, butterflies - it's known by many names, but it's a problem every speaker must confront. Here are 10 tips that Toastmasters International recommends for making your "butterflies fly in formation":

1. Familiarize yourself with the room beforehand. If you are using visual aids, practice with them.
2. Know the audience. If possible, introduce yourself to a couple of people.
3. Know your material. Practice, revise, practice!
4. Relax - breathing exercises keep you calm and controlled.
5. Visualize yourself giving your speech. If you visualize a successful speech, you will be successful.
6. Realize that people want you to succeed. A Toastmasters audience is understanding and supportive.
7. Don't apologize. You may draw the audience's attention to something that they otherwise may not have noticed.
8. Concentrate on the message, not the medium.
9. Turn nervousness into positive energy. Harness it, and transform it into vitality and enthusiasm.
10. Gain experience. Experience builds confidence, which is a key to effective speaking.

These tips are only a few of the helpful hints that you can learn by attending a Toastmasters meeting. Toastmasters allows you to learn in a supportive environment and to build confidence in your public speaking ability.

"Unleash your Potential" is the theme chosen by our International President, Jack Gillespie (a Winnipegger), for this year's Toastmasters meetings. You are welcome to be our guest and learn how to unleash your potential. We meet Friday mornings at 7:15 a.m. in Room 2M70. For further information, please call Dawna James at 786-9137 or Camilla Galovics at 786-9804.

The University of Winnipeg Toastmasters Club is saddened by the death of member Malcolm Brown who was killed in a tragic car accident, December 7, 1991. Malcolm was a Professor of Geography at the University of Manitoba and a respected cartographer. He was a most valuable club member.

University Co-Sponsors Virtuosi Concert Series

Sandra Graham's voice has been described as an "instrument to treasure." She will perform with The Winnipeg Chamber Music Society on Feb. 14 at Holy Trinity Church.

Thanks to The University of Winnipeg Music Committee and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Winnipeggers will have the opportunity to hear one of Canada's most exciting mezzo-sopranos, Sandra Graham. Graham will perform with The Winnipeg Chamber Music Society on Fri., Feb. 14, 8 p.m. at Holy Trinity Church.

Graham's voice has been described as "an instrument to treasure." After one performance, the Globe and Mail praised her "apparently effortless" singing, "through a range that extended seamlessly well into soprano territory."

Her Feb. 14 performance will be the third in the Virtuosi Concert Series co-presented by The University of Winnipeg and the CBC. The concerts are taped for re-broadcast on CBC Arts National.

According to Music Coordinator Harry Strub, the first two concerts in the series, in October and November, were critically acclaimed. "We are putting a lot of energy into the remaining three concerts to build up the audience," said Strub.

After Graham's performance, the St. Lawrence String Quartet is scheduled for Sat., March 7, 8 p.m. The quartet has performed across Canada, in Europe and in the United States. The young, dynamic ensemble has garnered high praise wherever they've played.

Violinist Moshe Hammer will finish up the series on March 28, 8 p.m. He has performed all over North America, Europe, Israel and China. Besides appearing as a guest soloist with numerous Canadian symphony orchestras, Hammer currently heads the acclaimed Amadeus Ensemble of Toronto.

Pianist David Moroz, founder and Artistic Director of The Winnipeg Chamber Music Society, will accompany both the St. Lawrence String Quartet and Moshe Hammer.

Tickets are $12 in advance at Ticketmaster or at the Info Booth, and are available at the door on concert night at Holy Trinity Church (Donald and Graham) for $14/$16.

The Virtuosi Concert Series is assisted by the Manitoba Arts Council, The Manitoba Arts Gaming Fund Commission, Manitoba Telephone System and Landau Lincoln Mercury Sales Limited.

Dean of Arts and Science.

"Mind Computers has made a sizable commitment to us, a commitment that goes beyond just the machines. They have provided us not only with a model facility, but also with a promise to maintain it at this level of technological currency. In the future, we hope to expand our relationship with them, perhaps by becoming a test site for some of their products."

According to Ernie Samulaitis, Director of Technical Services, Room 3C12 is a networked Novell-based PC facility which utilizes the 386 SX platform and has 14" colour monitors for the work stations. The laboratory utilizes the DOS Windows 3.0 operating system.

Departments interested in using the facility can now book time through the Office of the Dean of Arts and Science. All members of the University community will be invited to view the new lab at an official opening to be held later this term.

The University of Winnipeg Anniversary Trivia

Celebrating 25 YEARS
In 1968, computer fever hit The University of Winnipeg. A computer-style device was installed to store and retrieve student records in the Registrar's Office. Computers were also installed in the Chemistry and Statistics Departments.

Cabin Fever Olympics Warm the Frozen

You may not realize it now but by the last week in January all Winnipeggers go into suspended animation and stop functioning. To try and breathe life back into the frozen, The University of Winnipeg Students' Association (UWSA) Programming Dept. is conducting the second annual Cabin Fever Olympics.

Events for the Cabin Fever Olympics will be held during four lunch hours over two weeks, starting Jan. 27. Eight-member teams will compete in activities such as snow football, Simon Sez, Great Waldo Hunt, and other fantastic events.

Winners will receive Winnipeg Jets tickets to the Feb. 7 game as well as prizes supplied by Great Western Breweries.

All groups, clubs and organizations are invited to enter teams. There must be eight members, preferably four men and four women. Come on out and have some fun! To sign up, call Josh Weidman at 786-9126.

COMING EVENTS

"Coming Events" is compiled by University Relations. If you are planning a campus event, please let us know. Send the information (in writing) to Lois Cherney, University Relations, Room 4W17. Basic details about your event are required: what, when, where, sponsor, and the name of a contact person. Deadline for submissions is Jan. 27.

- There are limited spaces available in the 1992-93 Third-Year Abroad Program held at the Université de Perpignan in the south of France. Interested students should contact Ken Meadwell, Chair, Department of French at 786-9106 as soon as possible. The program is for students in third-year French.
